Perfectly pleased with pride

Pride & Prejudice review

Joey Comes
REPORTER | @joey_comes

Pride & Prejudice showcases the ties of sisterhood, a relatable and overtly dysfunctional family and the true power of a strong young woman's words and heart.

The play is directed by the esteemed Monica Bell and stars junior musical theatre major Paige Mason who plays Elizabeth Bennet and junior acting major JP McLaurin who plays Mr. Darcy.

Pride & Prejudice is a lively production that, though it is quite long, has a flowing movement about it between each scene change, every letter read aloud, dance number and costume change.

It is thankfully not a stagnant play and is quite comprehensible.

It might be thought that, with all the flowery and embroidered words used in that era, it would be a tough time understanding what all is occurring, but there honestly is no such thing.

Words are never lost in translation and it helps that all the dialects were held together quite strongly by each performer.

Paige Mason is a brilliant Elizabeth, who gives it her all with each bold step and logical thought of her body.

She is poised with a fine wit and realistic understanding of the world and figuring things out with every new chapter in her life.

JP McLaurin juxtaposes greatly against her as a statuesque Mr. Darcy, with perfect indifference that slowly crumbles to the irrepressible longing for Elizabeth. They make for quite the handsome pair.

The whole ambiance of the play seems to revolve around a certain simple elegance; from the carefully colorful costumes, to the beautifully crafted set that was dynamically used throughout the show.

There are vast intricate layers to this production.

Whether it is the change in scenery, from the woods and country decorum to regal estates with provincial land, the trying twists and turns of the heart or even just the characters themselves.

The characters all contrast each other greatly in the play from the prideful and stoic Mr. Darcy highly contrasting with the realistic and bold Elizabeth Bennet, the smiling and jubilant Mr. Bingley opposite the gentle and shy Jane Bennet and the absurdly hilarious Mrs. Bennet beside the calmer and wiser Mr. Bennet.

This is a perfectly pleasant production of Pride & Prejudice, structured with wonderful characters, elegant costumes and a beautifully sound architectural set.

Anything that might be thought of as boring or drab in the show definitely is not and even though it is a romance, it also shows just how important family is.

A family's love and support is the defining factor of this show, no matter how dysfunctional they might be or what class they

Empowering women one team at a time

Briana Rivas
REPORTER | @brilaurenbel

Rugby is known throughout the world as one of the most brutal and competitive sports ever. By the end of the game, players often end up bruised, bloody and sometimes severely injured.

Rugby has always been seen as a man's sport, however the women beg to differ.

Today, thousands of women participate in the sport. Women's rugby battles the societal standards set for women. These women who play the sport have set out to prove that they are just as tough, if not tougher, than any man.

According to a BuzzFeed article, one Australian player, Georgia Page, played almost an entire game with a broken nose. After getting the injury early on, she continued to play, unscathed. The video footage of the game went viral, gaining her the title, Rugby War Goddess.

At Coastal Carolina, a group of women have created a rugby team.

Coastal Carolina rugby player LeAnne Hudson said women's rugby is empowering because not only does it push your limits, but it crushes the feministic views commonly associated with women's sports.

"When you tell people you play rugby they look at you in a whole new light," said Hudson. "It teaches confidence to those who may not have it anywhere else."

Archarios celebrates anniversary, says goodbye to long-time advisor

Kaley Lawrimore
REPORTER | @kaleylawrimore

Archarios will be celebrating its 25 anniversary alongside former editors and art directors, as well as current faculty and staff on April 22.

The student-run organization first started out as a staff publication that students could write for, according to Archarios Editor Alison Lane.

"You know we're really just celebrating 25 years of winning awards and featuring student work," said Lane. "We've won the Pace-maker, we've also won the Pinnacle Awards, and last year we just took second in the ACP awards. So we have over 80 plus from over the years."

Bleed teal, Relay purple

Emma Freeman
REPORTER | @Emma_K_Freeman

Coordinator for Relay for Life, Ashley Pribble, said her biggest push to get people to help with Relay for Life is that cancer is something that affects every family.

“Everyone has been affected by cancer, from your family to your friends and so on,” said Pribble.

Last years Relay for Life teams raised $85,000 after donating closed.

Pribble said that they are trying to raise $100,000.

Currently, they have roughly $40,261. Donations can be given all the way through August.

“Something that people don’t know is that we work on Relay year round,” said Pribble, “We can still fundraise after the event, through August 31.”

Relay for Life starts raising money and gearing up for the next event all the way in September, and even though the event is in April, they are still going to be working through August on their goal of $100,000.

There were around 60 teams who signed up and participated last year. This year they are expecting around the same, if not more.

Pribble said Relay for Life really focuses on two aspects, one of them being College Against Cancer.

College Against Cancer is a way that people can get involved with setting up Relay and doing behind the scenes work.

The university even offers a College Against Cancer club.

Relay’s main goal is to benefit the American Cancer Society.

This society does a ton of work to help those with cancer.

They even provide transportation to people who need to get to chemotherapy treatments.

They also have a Hope Lodge. This is a place where people can live, for free, while they are undergoing treatment.

The American Cancer Society also gives wigs to women who have lost their hair through chemotherapy.

Pribble said 100 percent of the proceeds you give to me and my team go directly to the American Cancer Society.

Pribble believes that this is something that this campus could get really involved in and make a huge difference in the process.

Relay for Life will have guest

Relay for Life will be held this Friday, April 8. The event starts at 7 p.m. and goes until 7 a.m. Relay will be held on the track across from Brittain. If there is inclement weather, it will be in the HTC Center.

Local leader to be new commencement speaker

Katie Estabrook
REPORTER | @katieestabrook

President and CEO of The Jackson Companies in Myrtle Beach, Dennis Wade, will be speaking at the commencement ceremonies in May.

Wade, who is a graduate of the University of South Carolina, is very involved in the local community as well as on Coastal Carolina’s campus.

Along with his CEO position, he also serves on The Jackson Companies board of directors, the Coastal Education Foundation board of directors, the board of visitors for the Wall College of Business and the Horry County United Way Community Outreach Council.

Because of his dedication to the local community, Wade received the Leadership Grand Strand’s Ann DeBock award in 2007.

In order to be eligible to receive this prestigious award, one must have graduated from the Leadership Grand Strand program and must maintain a record of service and leadership throughout the Grand Strand community.

Those who receive the award have a passion for bettering the local community and demonstrate this by volunteering in service or civic clubs, serving on appointed board or commissions and demonstrating effective leadership skills in their personal and professional lives.

Wade has also been an active member of the Waccamaw Community Foundation for years. The foundation helps to ensure that local philanthropist’s donations are effectively being used to better the surrounding community.

While many were looking forward to seeing “House of Cards” actor Michael Kelly speak, a dedicated and passionate person like Dennis Wade is someone worth emulating and should not come as a disappointment.

Although Kelly will not be at this semester’s commencement ceremony due to conflicting schedules, Provost of the university, Ralph Byington, said that he would be making an appearance at a commencement in the future.

“He had commitments, of course,” said Byington “He is a very famous individual. There was a commitment that we knew about and we were hopeful that he was going to be able to still make it, but instead those programming needs put him some place else.”

are, when dealing with all things throughout one’s life, whether it would be love and loss, or heart-break and strife, family matters most of all.

Costume designer, Maria Nieto constructed elegant period costumes for the production.

“I really wanted to bring out each of the character’s personalities in what they wore, and because it is such a complicated show, in terms of families and who’s connected to who, there’s just a lot of information to absorb,” said Nieto.

Nieto said the colors of the clothes can help the audience identify who the characters are from the clothes representing each character’s personality.

“They’re connected and they are complimentary of each other,” said Nieto.

Nieto said she thinks it’s one of those shows where you either love the story or you hate it.

everyone, but if you enjoy a good romance, this is definitely that,” said Nieto. “It’s funny and I really enjoyed bringing out those aspects of the characters in the clothing and just kind of generally helping to create a world for them to live in because without the clothing, yeah you could probably do it in a modern style or something like that, but without the clothing it wouldn’t be Pride & Prejudice, it would just be Jane Austen’s story as an adaptation.”

Nieto said she thinks it’s a beautiful world that they live in and she really wanted to help bring that to life.

The play is being showcased at 79 Avenue Theatre. It will be playing on Wednesday, April 6, through Friday, April 8 at 7:30 p.m. On Saturday, April 9, there will be a showing at 3: p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Bi-annual Celebration of Inquiry centered around globalization

Katie Estabrook
REPORTER | @katieestabrook

Students, faculty and community members will have the chance to present creative inquiry and research at the bi-annual Celebration of Inquiry hosted at Coastal Carolina in April.

The bi-annual symposium offers a wide array of sessions that include presentations, panels and exhibitions on different topics.

This year's theme, Beyond Borders: Living in a Global Society, is centered around globalization.

According to the World Health Organization, globalization is the "increased interconnectedness and interdependence of peoples and countries" that necessitates changing national and international policies to allow "opening borders to increase the fast flow of goods, services, finance, people and ideas across international borders."

Advancements in technology as well as the internet's ability to connect individuals worldwide have aided in heightening the sense of a global economy. Because of the easy access to other cultures, it is almost impossible not to be affected by globalization in some way every day.

Whether the individual is enjoying a cup of coffee, eating a pizza, driving a foreign car or even attending a yoga class, these things would not be available without globalization.

The main presentations, which include the panel discussion, keynote address and panel presentations are required to be centered around this theme.

Professor of Economics and organizer of the Celebration of Inquiry, Dr. Yoav Wachsman, expressed excitement for one presentation in particular.

"I'm very excited to have the keynote speaker who is the U.S. ambassador of Iceland, Ambassador Robert Barber," said Dr. Wachsman. "Not only is he a very important person, but I've seen some of his YouTube videos and he is also a very eloquent speaker."

While the main presentations are required to revolve around globalization, others created by students, faculty and community members can be about any topic.

Wachsman said that students should use this time to further their learning.

"It's a way to enrich their lives outside of the classroom," said Wachsman. "They get to listen to faculty and other student's research, both within their department and outside their department and there are a wide array of events, so something should interest them."

Classes will be redirected from noon on April 12 to noon on April 14 for students to attend the sessions.

Wachsman explained that attendance by students is mandatory.

"Students are required and expected to attend," said Wachsman. "There are a wide array of events. We have sessions going on throughout the day and classes will be redirected, but this does not mean students should be on vacation during those times. It means they are expected to go to sessions and learn about something that interests them."

types of art, like paintings, abstract, digital media and recently interactive-motion pieces on their website. They also publish fiction, non-fiction, poetry and other work done by students.

According to Lane, Dean of the Edwards College, Dr. Dan Ennis, will be speaking at the celebration.

Graphic design professor, Paul Olsen, will also be in attendance to speak on behalf of Archarios.

This celebration is being held to commemorate Olsen's role in Archarios and pass the responsibility on to the next in line.

"Part of this celebration is actually saying goodbye to him," said Lane. "He's retiring from advising Archarios, it's pretty sad. He's been the advisor for 25 years and he's handing the torch off to Jacob Cotton, who will be advising us next year."

The celebration will have music, food and a small award ceremony to help celebrate the 25 anniversary.

"It's very sad that we're having to say goodbye to such an amazing advisor, but we're really trying to celebrate 25 years of being in print," said Lane.

The celebration will be in the Edwards Courtyard from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Coastal Carolina sweeps Gardner-Webb

Jessica Wetzler
REPORTER | @jessica_wetzler

Coastal Carolina opened up the Gardner-Webb weekend series with a 16-4 win on April 1 at the Spring Brooks Stadium.

After Coastal's 3-0 victory against Stetson the previous week, the team was back and ready to play ball.

Gardner-Webb started with an unsuccessful inning that concluded with zero runs. Coastal Carolina followed with zero runs made.

Gardner-Webb entered the second inning swinging with three runs, leaving Coastal to trail behind with a score of zero.

Paez added the first run for Coastal and Marks followed with another run.

Owings scored in the bottom of the fourth, leaving the score tied 3-3.

The fifth inning started off with Gardner-Webb adding one run to the scoreboard and Coastal adding six runs.

Paez made the first home run of the weekend series which allowed Marks to score.

Remillard, Young, Cooke and Chadwick also scored in the inning.

With the game heating up, Gardner-Webb fell as Coastal continued to score.

Paez and Remillard both scored again in the sixth inning. Lancaster and Marks scored in the seventh and Cooke, Woodall Jr., and Parrett finished off the game with scoring at the bottom of the eighth.

Coastal Carolina returned to play their second game against Gardner-Webb for the series.

Like the previous game, Coastal left with a victory.

ZACH REMILLARD | BREANNA GIDDINGS, THE CHANTICLEER

Rain delays may have postponed the game, but it did not postpone the victory for Coastal.

Gardner-Webb opened up the inning once again and managed to add three runs to start off the game. Coastal trailed behind momentarily.

Another run was made by GWU in the top of the second while Coastal followed with their first home run of the day made by Chadwick.

History was repeated as Gardner-Webb fell failed to make any more hits throughout the game.

Coastal concluded the second game with another victory and returned to play the final game against Gardner-Webb in the weekend series.

Hall of Fame Manager Tony La Russa and MLB All-Star Reggie Sanders threw out the first pitch during the final game of the series on April 3.

Chadwick put the first run on the scoreboard during the bottom of the second inning.

During the third inning, Gardner-Webb continued to trail behind with zero runs as Coastal made four more runs by Marks, Paez, Chadwick, and Young.

GWU made their first run during the fourth inning, leaving the score 5-1.

By the fifth inning, GWU added two runs.

Coastal reciprocated with a home run by Owings.

The game was quiet until the bottom of the seventh when Coastal added its final few runs for the game by Young, Owings, and Remillard.

Coastal finished the game with a victory of 10-6.

Coastal Carolina will travel this week to play the University of South Carolina.

FROM RUGBY

The Because of Rugby campaign launched by the Emory women's rugby team shines light on the sport's enforcement of positive body image.

According to the campaign, it encourages women to be strong in a culture that tells them to be delicate. It teaches women how to improve their bodies and not suffer for the bodies that society wants them to have.

"It's intense and not at all easy to play, but empowers us to show our strength in a world where social media dictates how we are supposed to look and behave," said Max Williams, Coastal Carolina rugby player. "You can be fat, skinny, short, athletic, etc. and still play."

Women in rugby show an undeniable bond with their teammates.

In a photo project entitled, Rugged Grace by the Harvard Women's Rugby Team, the women wrote what they loved about their teammates on each other's bodies.

"Rugby is so much about physically throwing your body on the line for your teammates during games and training, and that intense appreciation, love, trust and support for each other is what we wanted to reflect," said one of the women on the Harvard rugby team.

"The fact that we play 80 minutes beating down the other team, and then after go hang out and have a social with them has taught me a new level of sportsmanship," said Taylor Farrow, player on Coastal Carolina's rugby team.

Coastal Carolina's women's rugby team were unanimous in their love and admiration for the sport.

Rachel VanResslaer said she never thought she could be part of such an intense sport, but now that she is, she has learned to love her strength and her body.

"I have learned what it means to endure and fall in love with the game," said VanResslaer.

Playing Rugby has been motivational for the Coastal Carolina women players.

"I play women's rugby because it motivates me to keep pushing myself rather than give up everything I have worked so hard for," said Mikaela Groomes.

"Rugby empowers me to use the strength I didn't think I had," said Carly Ward.

REPORTER | @ian_brooking

It’s been four years since Macklemore and Ryan Lewis’ breakthrough debut album, The Heist, hit the music scene. Their first album brought them seven Grammy nominations, winning four for Best New Artist, Best Rap Album, Best Rap Song and Best Rap Performance.

In The Heist, several controversial topics are brought up by the rap duo such as the legalization of same-sex marriage and addiction. Macklemore rapped about his struggle with addiction and how hard it was for him to become an independent artist.

Four years later, the dynamic duo are back with their sophomore album entitled, This Unruly Mess I’ve Made.

While it has received mixed reviews since its February 26 release, this album is as emphatic and cutthroat as their debut album.

The opening song, “Light Tunnels” describes Macklemore’s emotions and what went on through his head during the 2014 Grammy Awards.

Many songs on this album discuss very sensitive issues. The song, “Kevin” featuring Leon Bridges, discusses how pharmaceutical companies overprescribe medication thus leading people to addiction. The song is a lament to an old friend of Macklemore’s who overdosed on prescription medicine.

This album also talks about the very touchy subject of a white person’s perspective of police brutality against African Americans in the song, “White Privilege II” featuring Jamila Woods. Macklemore also took part in silent protests in Seattle last year.

The most touching song on this album has to be the ode to his newborn daughter Sloane, in the song, “Growing Up” featuring Ed Sheeran.

The song discusses how he will do his best to be there for his little girl, but sometimes his fame and music lifestyle may get in the way of that.

This album has been long overdue. Macklemore has always been a controversial artist. If there is a sensitive topic, Macklemore has probably made a song about it.

This Unruly Mess I’ve Made takes the listener on an emotional roller coaster and is sure to score some Grammy nominations next year.

Based on the book by Nicholas Sparks, comes yet another romantic movie that will most likely make you ugly cry.

Set in Beaufort, North Carolina the ladies’ man, played by Travis Shaw, falls for the girl next door, played by Teresa Palmer, who initially wants nothing to do with him.

Travis is a veterinarian who may come off as the big headed player, but actually has a huge heart and a flair for romance.

His counterpart, Teresa, is a feisty medical student who just moved into the house next door. Soon enough, they realize they are meant for each other. This may seem like a very cliché story line, however it is far from predictable.

The classic, yet tragic, Nicholas Sparks twist is what makes this movie fantastic and definitely worth seeing.

Not only is it a great story, but the location is to die for. Beautiful beaches, boat rides and lots of twinkle lights will delight the part of your mind that longs for a good vacation.

It may even make you want to plan a weekend getaway to Beaufort, since it is not that far away!

Overall, The Choice really does have a lot to offer. There are both happy and sad moments while also encompassing so much romance and love.

Oh, and there are also puppies.

Even if you did not read the book, the movie is still enjoyable. One word of advice for seeing this movie, bring a box of tissues.

Which Wich Superior Sandwiches is a design-your-own sandwich shop with an ample amount of choices, almost like a fancier Subway.

The restaurant has stands with 10 different bags to choose from. Bag one is turkey, bag two is ham and pork, bag three is beef, bag four is chicken, bag five is seafood, bag six is vegetarian, bag seven is Italian, bag nine is classics and finally bag 10 is the breakfast bag.

There are also check mark boxes on the bags to choose different cheeses, spices, mustards, mayos, dressings, onions, veggies and extra add-ons. Every option has a box to check next to it so each sandwich is unique and fits the customer’s order perfectly.

This restaurant is a great environment for lunch dates and for those who are socially awkward when it comes to making a complex order because face-to-face talking is at a minimum.

The largest sandwich is 14 inches and is priced $11. It can easily be used for lunch and dinner. The medium is 10.5 inches and is priced at $8.25 and for $5.75 you can get a small 7 inch sandwich.

Another great option Which Wich offers is a lettuce wrap, skinny wrap and bowls for those who are watching their figure.

HOROSCOPES

Look for an opportunity and make your move. You will need to be ready to make a clear decision while on the go. If you act quickly and confidently, you will handle best any rivals. If you trust in your ability, you will rise to the top.

AQUARIUS

JANUARY 20 - FEBRUARY 19

You should aim to make personal changes that will result in compli-ments. A trendy look will impress someone you love.

PISCES

FEBRUARY 20 - MARCH 20

Stick to promises you know you can handle. You will be working long hours if you underestimate the extent of a job. Patience and planning will be required.

ARIES

MARCH 21 - APRIL 19

You need to face emotional issues head-on. Settle any differences you have so that you can freely move for-ward. Compromise will help you.

TAURUS

APRIL 20 - MAY 20

An aggressive tone will help you get what you want. Offering an incentive will be enough to keep everyone happy and allow you to maintain a position.

GEMINI

MAY 21 - JUNE 20

Suggest reforms that will bring about a superior work environment. Do not feel you have to make a cash donation, as your suggestions will be sufficient.

CANCER

JUNE 21 - JULY 22

Work alone until you are sure that what you have to present is perfect. If you leave room for criticism, someone will ruin your plans. Treat yourself.

LEO

JULY 23 - AUGUST 22

Take a chance to get what you want up and running. Recognize what you are up against and plan ahead to counter-act anything that may get in your way.

VIRGO

AUGUST 23 - SEPTEMBER 22

Size up what's going on around you. Bide your time and make subtle chang-es that will not be detected by someone looking for a fight.

LIBRA

SEPTEMBER 23 - OCTOBER 23

You will be questioning others' actions. Do not be too quick to divulge your concerns. Diplomacy is encouraged if you want to eventually get your way.

SCORPIO

OCTOBER 24 - NOVEMBER 22

Express your thoughts and find out those of others. Sharing will encourage you to follow through with the changes you have been contemplating.

SAGITTARIUS

NOVEMBER 23 - DECEMBER 21

Strive for greater personal security. Do not let anyone persuade you to follow a path that doesn't suit you. Do not feel guilty. Do what makes you happy.

CAPRICORN

DECEMBER 22 - JANUARY 19

Keep an open mind, but do not let any-one railroad you into something that is not in your best interest. You should not jeopardize your reputation.
